

Academic Session No: 417

June 11, 2019

Dear Spelt Member,

Assalam o Alaikum

Celebrating 35th year of SPELT, June's Academic session was held at Star Links School, Shahrah e Faisal. It was an activity based session where participants enjoyed and learnt through unique and interactive activities. We always welcome our existing members, new teachers and ELT students to become a part of training and meet the ELT community.

Teaching Writing through Fun Activities

Writing is considered as the most boring and tedious skill among four language skills. Traditionally, students are found struggling the most during writing classes in a Pakistani context. Most EFL/ESL teachers focus on the traditional way of training students for writing; which includes provision of a topic and drilling to get the content produced.

21st century learners always look for activities and fun to get involved in the process of learning. Writing when considered as a boring task should be presented as an interesting activity and students must enjoy being part of writing related activities.

This workshop intends to suggest interesting and non-traditional ways of teaching writing where not only learners' imagination can be triggered but also facilitates flood of innovative ideas along with relevant vocabulary and the intrinsic motivation toward writing.

Ms. Alia Faruqui earned her MS degree in Applied Linguistics from NED University of Engineering & Technology. She has a vast experience of teaching at various prestigious universities including NED University of Engineering & Technology, University of Karachi, and National University of Modern Languages. Her research interest includes second language learning and teaching. She is currently associated with Iqra University as part of Center for English Language.
