

Embarking on the 21st Century Teaching-Learning Skills Considering Pandemic Challenges

Education in the 21st century highlights globalization and internationalization. Regarding 21st-century teaching-learning skills, there are other skills either being oversight or not paid attention to in terms of making part of the curriculum. To effectively engage and teach students, particularly Generation Y and Z, and prepare them for workforce development, 21st-century teaching-learning skills should be one of the core objectives of every lesson.

This presentation will orient the top skills desired in the 21st century and at the workplace regardless of the industry. The focus will be on how learners can develop these sought-after skills with the help of instructors for better skill-sets with productivity.
