

The power of English Language: Understanding our Ideologies around Language Teaching and Learning

Why do we learn English? What power does it hold? What opportunities does it present? What role do we play as ESL instructors in shaping linguistic identities of our students?

Let's pause and reflect upon our experiences of teaching and learning English, explore some of our own beliefs regarding language and power, and discuss how can we bring a shift in our ideologies around language teaching and learning. Only if we are aware of our own beliefs and biases, can we facilitate students and educational systems to be reflective and progressive.

The session will include opportunities to:

- Reflect on our experiences and beliefs
- Hold meaningful discussions with peers
- Begin journaling our linguistic autobiography
- Begin developing a personal plan of action

The session is an attempt to reflect, learn and progress together to make better decisions for ourselves and our classrooms.

Ms. Fariha Khalil is currently pursuing concurrent masters in Curriculum and Instruction (with a focus on Language, Literacy and Culture) and TESOL at the University of Washington. She has worked as an ESL instructor and trainer with children, youth and adults in Pakistan for over 8 years. Her areas of interest include decolonizing education, multilingual education and teaching English in a globalized world.*
