

Planning Effective Language Teaching Lessons

In the past, teaching languages was seen as a simple matter of using the grammatical translation approach and treating the students as inert objects. However, we now regard teaching as a continuous learning process in which students are integrated as equal stakeholders. Planning lessons must use all the knowledge gained from the literature on language education. Therefore, every decision made throughout the lesson planning process must be carefully considered.

This session will encourage the drafting of the "what, why, and how" of learning outcomes while examining the format of a skill-based lesson plan. It will make it easier to create SMART goals while including the 'blooms taxonomy'. Additionally, you will discover how to use Howard Gardner's notion of "Multiple Intelligence" to enhance the effectiveness of your lessons.

Sobia Begum is a certified ELT practitioner with Cambridge University's In-service Certification in English Language Teaching (ICELT). She has more than 15 years of experience in teaching English to different levels in private school settings. She is currently working as a Facilitator in Usman Public School Campus VI. She is also an associate member of IATEFL and is currently pursuing MA in Teaching English as a Foreign Language (TEFL) from Allama Iqbal Open University.
