

Different Learning Styles: adjusting our Teaching and Assessment to accommodate all types of learners

TARGET AUDIENCE: All Teachers, Coordinators, Principals and Heads

“Learning styles” are a student’s preferred way of absorbing, processing, comprehending, and retaining new information and skills. Learning styles are part of a student’s individual differences. It is important for teachers to understand the differences in their students’ learning styles so that they can present information using variety of techniques and appropriate activities to help all students learn.

Tamrika Khvtisiashvili is an English Language Specialist, who has facilitated numerous workshops to educators and students in contexts and geographies as diverse as Russia, India, Uzbekistan, Estonia and Palestine. She did her initial studies in Film and Radio and received her Ph.D. in Theoretical Linguistics and M.A. in TESOL from the University of Utah and University of Frankfurt. Her dissertation research was on linguistic documentation and revitalization practices of indigenous and endangered languages of the Caucasus.*
