Members receive certificate of participation and new participants attend the session for free. ☺

Teach Reading Skills to 21st Century Learners

Reading is the greatest source of information and knowledge. A person is incomplete and considered illiterate if he does not read. That is why reading skill becomes an essential skill for the students of schools, colleges and universities. The need of this skill has increased even more in the era of technology where an individual has to analyze, evaluate, and synthesize the written material in order to communicate and collaborate with the global world.

Today's parents and teachers need to learn strategies to develop metacognitive skills of their children and to make them efficient readers who would survive in 21st century successfully.

In this academic session, participants will learn effective reading strategies like 'direct intervention' and 'extensive practice' to enable learners to become successful readers. These strategies when applied in ESL/EFL classrooms will assist students to read for pleasure, for information, for evaluation etc.
