

Action Research for English Language Classes

We, the residents of earth, are astonished by the ever-changing world of the existing century. The unpredictable circumstances from side to side in daily routines are now inevitable. We must have noticed that the clock has been moving faster, and changes are taking place more rapidly than ever before. How to deal with it? The answer is an investigation, the inquiry, the research.

It has been certified that the research can produce the knowledge that is highly in demand in uncertain circumstances; right there lies the way forward for language skills and learning techniques. Language teachers of the present time are experiencing the evolution of language via undefined resources. The spellings and words and the whole grammatical structure is relying on digital linguistics. The session will focus on action research as an excellent tool for language teachers to acquire valuable and fruitful knowledge.

The session will orient the attendees:

- § To think implicitly
- § To dig out for findings
- § To act & believe as a researcher and
- § To help to solve problems.

Amber Nasreen Anjum has done MS in Applied Linguistics & she is a Ph.D. fellow of Applied Linguistics from the University of Sindh Jamshoro.
